Message from the Board of Directors

Dear Friends,

Your generosity makes a meaningful difference in the lives of those we serve. In addition to our work in the United States, you made it possible for us to extend our reach into 18 other countries in fiscal year 2016. Your support provides hope and resources for those without life’s essentials.

With the ongoing dedication of corporate partners, energetic volunteers and passionate friends throughout the year, we fed bodies, minds and futures as we distributed globally 105 million pounds of food and essentials valued at $415 million. Thanks to these relationships, our collective outreach has benefited 5.9 million individuals around the world.

Again, none of this would have been possible without our generous donors!

We appreciate you joining us as we continue to be a springboard to a better life for the people we serve each day.

IMPACT ACROSS THE NATION
In fiscal year 2016, through our national network of more than 1,500 active partner agencies, Feed the Children distributed 92 million pounds of food and essentials valued at $352 million. Through this network, our collective outreach benefited 5.4 million people in the United States.

SUMMER FOOD & EDUCATION PROGRAM (SFEP)
For many children in the United States, school meals are the only food they can depend on every day. When the school year ends so do school lunches, which serve more than 13 million children nationwide. Without school meals, many of these children face a summer of hunger.

With the help of public funds and private partners, our Summer Food and Education Program served 212,000 meals to children at 37 sites across Oklahoma. The program is further enhanced by the combined resources of Feed the Children’s logistics and transportation experience, along with the support of the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Summer Food Service Program.

In addition to feeding bodies, we also fed minds and futures, providing 4,700 backpacks, school supplies and 18,000 books to children in the program with the help of our partners. We were even able to send groceries to hungry families on days when children could not reach the meal sites in person.
“Feed the Children is a world-class organization, which develops partnerships with corporations, allowing for long-term sustainability with the focus to ultimately help end hunger by providing food and essentials. It is a pleasure to call Feed the Children our partner!”

INTERNATIONAL
INTERNATIONAL

Internationally, we use a child-focused community development (CFCD) approach emphasizing four key program pillars to transform lives by improving the food and nutrition security of mothers and children. This helps to reduce malnutrition and poverty. Feed the Children served more than 541,000 individuals through program activities and sponsored approximately 25,000 children in our communities and schools across our country programs.

The food & nutrition pillar is focused on improving the nutritional status of pregnant and lactating women, and of children under two years of age.

The health & water pillar works to ensure that our clean-water and sanitation interventions work to prevent common illnesses for children and their families. Under both these pillars (food & nutrition and health & water), Feed the Children empowered 137,000 caregivers by providing training around good nutrition practices and healthy behaviors, and supporting them to disseminate that knowledge within their communities.

The goal of the education pillar is to improve children’s school performance. Feed the Children seeks to reduce barriers and add incentives to ensure children enroll and stay in school so they can reach their full potential. With this goal in mind, regular, nutritious school meals were provided to 229,000 school-aged children.

Feed the Children’s livelihoods pillar equips parents with the knowledge and skills needed to provide and care for their families. More than 26,000 people benefited from our village savings and loan groups, which help increase access to capital, particularly for women.
“Being part of the Feed the Children’s development projects in our community is of great help, and it also helps our community grow. The children are benefited greatly where they most need it.”

“Our malnutrition rate five years ago was 18%. After the intervention from the Feed the Children program, we have a malnutrition rate of 8.2%. In other words, more than 50% is reduced. That’s very dramatic, and we’re happy.”

EDUCATION
One of the best ways to help children escape poverty is through education. Feed the Children’s education initiatives—both in the U.S. and around the world—are focused on improving children’s school performance by reducing barriers and adding incentives to ensure all children enroll and stay in school to reach their full potential.

Domestic

In 2006, Feed the Children launched the Homeless Education and Literacy Program (H.E.L.P.). Since its inception, we have distributed more than 902,000 backpacks to American children who are homeless. During this fiscal year, H.E.L.P. provided almost 65,000 of these backpacks, which often contain school supplies and nutritious snacks.

In fiscal year 2016, Feed the Children operated four Teacher Store locations — in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Elkhart, Indiana; La Vergne, Tennessee; and Ontario, California. Each offered free school supplies to educators in Title I schools (schools with high numbers/percentages of children from low-income families). We hosted 21,376 teacher visits and gave away more than $6.8 million in teaching materials as well as more than 869,000 books, benefiting students in 175 school districts.

International

Our education programs impacted 298,000 children in communities and schools in fiscal year 2016. Through our programs, we provide regular, nutritious school meals and deworming medicine to promote good nutrition and support academic success. To address common barriers to attending school, such as inability to pay school fees, Feed the Children is able to provide shoes and school supplies, such as backpacks and uniforms. Additionally, we support the strengthening of parent-teacher associations. These associations encourage parents to engage in their children’s education and they strengthen the educational opportunities for children.

GOVERNMENT RELATIONS UPDATE
At Feed the Children, we seek to be a voice for the voiceless, and to partner with government agencies already engaged in similar work both in the United States and around the world. Much of our advocacy work at Feed the Children centers around strategic policy reform and collaboration to address the systemic issues of hunger and poverty.

Domestic
Our relationships with local, state and federal governments are an integral part of administering effective outreach programs. In addition to traditional governments, we also partner with several Indian tribal organizations.

In 2016, our domestic-policy work focused on Child Nutrition Reauthorization. This legislation funds the USDA’s Summer Food Service Program (SFSP). Since 2014, Feed the Children has organized a SFSP across Oklahoma aimed at keeping children who receive free or reduced-price meals during the school year fed during the summer (see page 11 for details). We also worked collaboratively with Senate Agriculture Committee staff. This work was to help get specific language included in a demonstration project for the 10 worst-performing states for the SFSP program.

International
Not long after the close of fiscal year 2016, Feed the Children was awarded the single, largest grant in our history. The award, which is comprised of $19.15 million from USAID and $19.15 million from our corporate partners, will build the most comprehensive nutrition and anti-stunting program in Malawi.

Our policy work in 2016 was conducted in close coordination with InterAction, an umbrella organization which coordinates the policy work of all major U.S.-based NGOs (nongovernment organizations). Major accomplishments of this community include the passage of the Global Food Security Act. This significant piece of international food-aid reform will make U.S. aid more efficient and significant.
DISASTER RESPONSE
Feed the Children’s outreach efforts also encompass disaster relief and response. When natural disasters strike, we mobilize quickly to provide immediate aid to affected communities. Working with our local partners, we make sure children and families affected by natural disasters have the food and necessities they need to survive.

Domestic

During this fiscal year, Feed the Children distributed more than $3.8 million worth of food and essentials to disaster-affected regions in the United States.

Shortly after a state of emergency was declared for Flint, Michigan, in January 2016, Feed the Children trucks started arriving with bottled water that was desperately needed. The city’s public water supply was contaminated with lead. Working with numerous partners, Feed the Children delivered more than 28 semitruck loads of water to the area in about six weeks. That equated to more than 369 tons of safe drinking water.

But our response did not end there. Thanks to our generous partner Nature Made®, we delivered more than one million vitamin C tablets and more than seven million tablets of Calcium Vitamelts®. Both vitamin C and calcium are believed to help reduce lead absorption in the body, which may counter the effects of lead on a child’s ability to learn. Further shipments to Flint included children’s books.

International

In three of Feed the Children’s country programs in fiscal year 2016, more than 1,000 individuals were trained in disaster risk-reduction to prepare for natural disasters. Also, emergency food, water and tarps were provided to 33,000 individuals as disaster response in order to alleviate the traumatic effects of natural disasters. When Typhoon Melor struck the Philippines in December of 2015, we responded by providing food to thousands of children in the 30 days following the disaster, as well as equipping volunteer teams with cooking pots and plastic sheets for protection.

INDIVIDUALS SERVED INTERNATIONALLY
FRIENDS & FOUNDATIONS
Thanks to the generous financial donations of individuals and churches, as well as friends and foundations, critical program work continued to be supported in fiscal year 2016. It takes all of us working together to make a significant difference in the lives of those we serve.
OUTREACH EVENTS
Feed the Children can’t fight poverty alone. We need the help of public and private partners. Together, we were able to provide food and essentials to children and families in need across the U.S. One of the most tangible ways our partners contribute is through food-distribution events. Through these events, our corporate partners provide free food and other essentials to children and families in need. A few of our special partners are highlighted below.
CORPORATE PARTNERS
CORPORATE PARTNERS

At Feed the Children, experience has taught us that the most effective way to combat hunger is through cross-sectional relationships and partnerships.

In fiscal year 2016, we partnered with approximately 600 corporations that donated products or provided the funds to purchase and deliver food and necessities to hungry children. (Below are just a few of our valued partners.) It is these partners that enable us to carry out our mission and quite literally make us who we are.
