Feed the Children has pursued its vision of a world without childhood hunger since its founding in 1979. From a ministry originally focused on international support, we expanded our programs to address hunger in the United States, eventually arriving at our current model of fielding product donations of food and other resources from corporate donors and distributing them through a network of local community partners to assist families struggling with food insecurity. This network now includes partners across the U.S., and we currently maintain programming in 10 countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean designed to reduce hunger and malnutrition, teach healthy practices and promote self-reliance.